. Reviews She is the best and she is my #1. 22 Jan 2015 I met her when she was 17 and I was 25. She already had a long history with her ex-boyfriend. She loved him and we got married on Valentine's Day. I loved her for who she is, she was the whole package. She was true to me, a loving person, caring, passionate and pretty much every other word that we can use. After 2-3 years I felt that I need a break and ended up not seeing her for a few months. My ex-boyfriend and she started an affair. She was not with me and she was so confused, sad, hurt and angry but she carried on with her life with him. I found out from her mom. She found out and I was happy. It was the last straw for me. She made things worse. She did not try to reconcile but went back to her dad. She called me up and said "you are not my husband, you are not my life, I am sorry." She and her dad are still together. I was shocked to say the least. I almost ended my life. I felt lonely, abandoned and cheated. In the end she loved herself more than me. I cried for 4 days and couldn't go to work or answer my phone. I left her. We decided to get a divorce as I wanted to be free. I moved on. I miss her and the kids we had together. If I ever needed a friend, she was there. I am a single parent now and she still is my support. She is the best and she is my #1. I don't know how I would go through this life without her. Although the field of cellular telecommunications has experienced dramatic changes since the first crude mobile phone call more than 40 years ago, at its core the field still involves connecting telephone calls to mobile telephone subscribers. In most telephone service provider systems, this is accomplished by cellular network providers, such as a cellular service provider or a Personal Communications Service (PCS) service provider, wirelessly connecting mobile users to a public telephone network. A subscriber uses his or her telephone to call another telephone. The dialed number is converted by the public telephone network into a format understandable by a base station of the cellular network. A base station is responsible for providing coverage in a certain geographic area, and relays the dialed telephone number to 82157476af
